The Narratorial Voice of the Scribes of Samaria: Ezra IV 8-VI 18 RECONSIDERED

by
JOSHUA BERMAN
Ramat Gan, Israel

The presence of a large block of Aramaic narrative in the Hebrew Bible has long posed a conundrum for scholars of Ezra-Nehemiah. The Aramaic pericope is often thought of as a collection of fragments, but recent arguments with a few lines of narrative connections, in fact, make up more than one-third of its volume. These connections, not only connecting pieces of narrative between the pericope, but indeed, following the last document, the response to the pericope, another six verses of narrative in Aramaic in the Hebrew Bible. Hebrew narrative resumes at vi 19.
